You're going to walk from now on. But they know how ridiculous that would be because then the person you're insisting pay money is not in a position to get to the place where money is to be acquired. So here's what they do. January 1, they say, Ernie, you are three months behind, your license is suspended. So on January 3 after it has soaked in on me and I've driven a couple of days while my license is suspended, I decide that maybe I better take some action so I go get it reinstated. And they reinstate my license. Then the very next day, January 4, I stop paying child support. April 4 around, I'm 90 days behind. I've been driving three months. They say, Ernie, your license is suspended on April 5 because I wasn't paying child support for 90 days. I say, okay, now remember I haven't paid child support in 90 days. They suspended my license once. The very next day I go get me another work permit, and I'm still not paying child support, haven't paid a dime, not one red dime. It's supposed to be not one thin dime, not one red penny, haven't paid one red penny. Ninety more days go by. That makes a total of 180 days or 6 months since they started messing with me as far as my license and I haven't paid a dime. So they suspend my license again. The following day I go get me another work permit and I drive another three months and haven't paid one nickel and they suspend my license, and I begin to like this and I'm starting to strike up an acquaintanceship with whoever it is I go to to get my...

SPEAKER WITHEM: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: ...license reinstated, get my work permit. So I drive a while longer. They suspend it then I go get me another work permit and we just go on and on and on. This is what happened when you get geniuses, when you get rocket scientists working on mundane things like legislation designed to put as big a hurt on people whom you can already hurt as much as you want to anyway. What will they do then? They'll say this is not working. We better do something else. What would make this scalawag pay up is to put him in jail. So then they go to the law that already exists and they have action taken because I haven't paid my child support, then I'm cooling my heels in the clink. And maybe sitting in the clink will make me think, Senator Brown. But that can be done already. So why should...
